The Starting Questions

Question 1: What are your weak points and strong points in group work?
Communication, decision-making, scheduling, conflict resolution, etc...

Our strongest point is that we all have a solid background in programming, which really helps when tackling technical tasks. However, we tend to do perfect our task in the details, which can sometimes slow us down.

Question 2: What do you hope to learn as a group during the project?
Communication skills, time-management, conflict-resolution skills.

We're looking to enhance our communication and soft skills alongside our technical abilities. It's important for us to be able to not only handle the technical side of things smoothly but also effectively manage our interactions and teamwork dynamics.

Question 3: What do you think the assignment is asking you to do?

The assignment aims to enhance our understanding of N-gram language models by applying them to various tasks involving NLP, thereby improving both our technical skills in NLP and our collaborative abilities within a group setting.

Question 4: What role do you hope to fulfill during the group project?
Leader, communicator, to keep the overview, note-taker, etc...

We've decided to rotate roles among us to gain experience in different aspects of the project. So far here, I plan to focus on executing my tasks efficiently and reporting back clearly to the team

Question 5: Which part of the group assignment do you want to take the lead on?
Writing, researching, formatting, etc...

I want to search on the behavior of words in the dictionary, create plots to visualize our findings, and both construct and implement the Unigram model and calculate the Pointwise Mutual Information (PMI) for our project.

Question 6: What are your goals for the project?
A high grade, a passing grade, to learn something new?

My primary goal for this project is to deepen my understanding of NLP techniques, particularly through hands-on experience with building language models and analyzing linguistic data.

Question 7: What type of worker are you?
What are your individual strengths and weaknesses? Writing, researching, formatting, etc....

I think I'm hardworking and persistent, always committed to achieving thorough results. Sometimes, I can get too absorbed in understanding every aspect of an issue from the base, which can be time-consuming. I'm working on learning to manage how deeply I dive into details to improve efficiency.

Question 8: What personal development goal do you have for this group project?
Become a better listener, take the lead more often, etc.....

For this group project, my personal development goal is to enhance my ability to manage time effectively, especially when researching and understanding complex topics. This will help me balance depth with efficiency in my work.

My Random question is: Do you have any pets?

No, I don't have any pets currently because I recently moved here from my country to study, and I couldn't bring my Siamese cat with me. It was a really tough decision and a hard moment for me. Living with him for about three years was one of the best experiences I've had.
